

We must all die; we are like water spilled on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again. But God will not take away life, and he devises means so that the banished one will not remain an outcast.

(2 Samuel 14:14)

ressurrection

God clothes with beauty
even the things of decay — rusted poles.
Moss-grown tombs. The tree
that will die
this sunset,
and our long cherished love.

At the distance the discarded high-rises ruefully stick out
with a striking appeal.
Beauty is never fleeting anything.
It is only arriving
more.
